Long-Term Population Increments 1750 to 2050 Millions Millions Historical Estimates and Medium Fertility Variant 100 100 80 Annual increments One peculiarity of the Peak Annual Increment narrative promoted by the United Nations in 1996 is its failure to mention Peak Annual Increment occurred [about 10 million too high] during 1990. 90 000 85 000 80 000 75 000 70 000 1982 1990 65 000 60 000 55 000 50 000 45 000 40 000 1990 1970 1980 1950 1960 2000 2010 United Nations - World Population Prospects 2022 United Nations - World Population Prospects 2022 - Online Edition Department of Economic and Social Affairs - Population Division https://population.un.org/wpp/Download/Files/1 Indicators CATORS COMPACT REV1.xlsx World Births minus Deaths (thousands) 95 000 90 000 85 000 80 000 75 000 70 000 1982 1990 2012 65 000 60 000 55 000 50 000 45 000 40 000 1950 1960 1970 1980 1990 2000 2010 Arguably, the official narrative and the associated spreadsheet have been retrospectively revised [upwards and onwards] after 1996 to produce their current Twin Peaks paradigm whereby: Nations Nations 55 000 Peak Peak 50 000 45 000 40 000 +

2020 %20(Standard)/EXCEL FILES/1 General/WPP2022 GEN F01 DEMOGRAPHIC INDI Another remarkable feature of the Peak Annual Increment narrative promoted by the UN in 1996 is it's failure to predict the second Peak Annual Increment appearing [30 years after 1982] in 2012. 2020

The search for Data Shaping artefacts is a lot easier with an understanding of the United Nations 1996 World Population narrative that had the Peak Annual Increment arriving back the 1980s.

There are clear data artefacts that suggest these retrospective revisions were applied to nations [such as Gabon] that arrived at Peak Annual Increment in the 1990s but suddenly surged so they could enjoy experiencing a late Peak Annual Increment in the 2010s [according to the UN spreadsheet].
